

Abstract

The significant increase in the use of modern loads of power electronics for many problems particularly reactive power compensation, imbalance and active filtering of harmonics. In this paper, we study a method to identify current references called method of SRF which allows identification when the source voltages are unbalanced