This work consists on designing a continuous speech recognition system using pattern recognition techniques as a front end and applying hidden markov models for word smoothing and use of syntactic rules for final recognition