Abstract

This paper presents an insight on genetic algorithm (GA) encoding representations applied to graph partitioning problems. Redundancy and blindness, two important features that have a direct impact on the performance of the method, are theoretically investigated and some conclusions are drawn