Abstract

In this work, the developed mathematical extension of the semi analytical Method of Lines (MoL) for the solution of Poisson's equation which governs the voltage distribution within semiconductor devices is adapted to fit realistic considerations related to the geometry and the electrodes configuration of such structures. The obtained tool is then applied to find the potential profile within a MOS capacitor in deep depletion mode